2WO+1NE=2

2WO+1NE=2 (2+1=2) is an ethical designer

brand based in Athens, Greece, founded in 2017, by Stella Panagopoulou and Valisia Gotsi. Through a synthesis of minimalism and deconstructivism, espousing the principle of environmental consciousness, 2WO+1NE=2 aims to sound out the cultural fluidity of an increasingly nomadic generation.

Focused on creating Sustainable & tailored ready-to-wear and not a trend-follower, 2WO+1NE=2 creates long-lasting garments or even reconstructs its over-worn ones, in local production, using exclusively French & Bound seams and natural fibers, so as to contribute to the longevity of the garment.

Based on the design project of NOMADISM, each collection is inspired and dedicated to a different city across the globe, drawing elements from its art scene, architecture, cinema, music, and people.

The brand converts the beauty and uniqueness of each place into its edgy collections, by incorporating their craftsmanship techniques and aesthetic concept.

The crystallization of the notions, essences and shapes of each given place are worked into the garments themselves.

2WO+1NE=2 strives for a perpetual battle with conservatism and conventionality, envisaging clothes not as strictly functional everyday items but as multidimensional structures, maintaining at the same time fashion's allure and scrutinizing urge.

COLLECTIONS

A/W'21-22 VIENNA COLLECTION

For the A/W '21-22 collection we are traveling to Vienna. Inspired by the city's incredible cultural heritage, we created a line that balances between the maximalism of Vienna's palaces, found in the Austro-Hungarian Empire, and the striking bequest of the Viennese Secession.

Luxurious Silk, Cashmere and Ethical Wool softly caressing the body, while Royal crimson Velvet highlighting it. Silhouettes flattering the female figure, but always retaining an edge with designs influenced by the sinuous curves and the sense of movement of the Art Nouveau, the Coat of Arms of Vienna's noble families, the sketches of Egon Schiele and of course the symbolist paintings of Gustav Klimt and his love of the female body.

back to Marrakech-

It's been 21 years since the last time you were here. Still a child, you remember diving into the madness of Jemaa El Fna, a whirlwind of colour and noise, where throngs of people were weaving between the tightly packed stalls of the vibrant markets, exhibiting pyramids of brightly coloured spices with enticing smells wafting through the souks, richly woven rugs and a thousand other oriental goods; where the clamour of voices was haggling and the cries of vendors were competing for customers; where the intense performance of fire-eaters, snake charmers, cross-dressing belly-dancers, Amazigh acrobats and astrologers, was stimulating your senses. And the moment you were all about to get lost in this intoxicating experience, a warm hand had been there to keep you secure.

A hand that has left an indelible imprint in your memory; soft touch, slim delicate fingers, almond-shaped long red nails, and a Hamsa Mehndi design on the outer side of her wrist, to bring good luck and protect from illnesses, djinns and evil eye. But her own eyes were pure stars filled with love and light, always half-covered by her silk black wavy Essaouira's argan-oil scented hair, that you enjoyed spending hours and hours playing with, creating ornate braids. Her thin but imposing silhouette, always dressed in minimal and clean lines of sustainable light fabrics as tencel, organic cotton and linen. The garments she wore, unique just like her; shapes emulating the Moroccan Architecture and the distinctive tiling, rope and straps embellishments, padded shoulders and disclosed backs, structured cut-outs, djellabas and abayas inspired dresses and kaftans, in a color palette switching between the serene ivory white, sand and dusty pink to the bold emerald green and majorelle blue, unfolding a majestic journey from Marrakech to Chefchaouen. That was your mother; strong, beautiful, unfiltered, real.

And today you have come back at the land where the sun sets, the west, and dressed in her favourite dapper loose ivory dress and black Babouche shoes, you enjoy a mint tea while strolling among paths winding through tall shoots of bamboo and labeled displays of a mind-boggling different types of cactus, palm trees and tropical plants, mirrored on the reflecting pools, fountains and pergolas, in the oasis of Jardin Majorelle. As you stand there marveling at the evocative hidden majesty; the architectural wonders of the Red City with its numerous riads and the open courtyards, the sandstone buildings and the dusty streets, the towering minarets against deep blue skies, the intricately carved archways and the ornate mosques; you can feel yourself whisked into another dimension of incomparable sensations. A different world where you connect to your inner self, where you embody all your memories, your truth, your genuineness, where the past fills you with courage to move forward, to enhance your incredible journey.

A/W'20-21 MONTRÉAL COLLECTION

2, February, 2021

12.22 p.m.

In fast forward-

Walking lengthwise RÉSO, passing by interconnected office towers, hotels, shopping centers, residential and commercial complexes, convention halls, universities and performing arts venues, an endless underground city; stunned by the information overload, you stop to take a break at the Cinema Du Park. Just watched for the 3rd time Xavier Dolan's "Les Amours Imaginaires", and quite satisfied, you throw your empty sugar-maple tea cup in a recycle bin and you follow the stairs upwards, till you can feel your scarf-skin shivering by the frosty wind, and your hands subconsciously wrapping the black wool and cashmere coat, tighter around your body, in the intersection of Rue Prince-Arthur and Avenue du Parc.

After 5 minutes you are strolling up to a snowy commercial artery and cultural heritage site, named as Saint Laurent Boulevard. You grab a smoked salmon bagel and you walk towards the first street performers of Place Jacques-Cartier, entering the historic Old Port, which is now transformed into an urban ice-fishing village, portraying the actual definition of 7 Fires Prophecy; 'You will know the chosen ground has been reached when you come to a land where food grows on water. If you do not move you will be destroyed'.

And then you move quickly, and you run, and you leave behind the Virgin Mary who keeps welcoming travelers with open arms and her wise overlook on the port, placed on the roof of Notre-Dame-de-Bon-Secours Chapel, and the traffic noise of Ville Marie Boulevard, and you enter the modernist Berri-UQAM station, and you take the filled with a profusion of public art Métro, and in 4 minutes you find yourself staring, astonished by the spectacular futuristic example of "Bucky's" geodesic architecture. The Biosphère; three-dimensional units, a triangle on the outside, hexagonal on the inside, and curved to fit a given arc, as its structural basis, all together connected in the shape of a dome. While each component is independent, it cannot exist without the others. The 286-hectare oasis ex-site of Expo 67, Parc Jean-Drapeau has been converted to a giant winter playground, where women of all ages, dressed in warm knitted, velvet, wool and cashmere, minimal garments in classic silhouettes, were blissfully celebrating the Fête des Neiges, and for some reason you feel something explained but unexplainable inside this beautiful setting. But your time is up.

You jump in the nearest wormhole and in 24 minutes, like a contemporary time-traveler, you are in Place d'Armes, suddenly surrounded by so many diverse eras; the gothic revival Notre-Dame Basilica, the 30's art-deco limestone Alfred Building, the late 60's prestigious modern international style 500 Place D'Armes, the 80's whopping eight stories tall cigar-brown sandstone New York Life Building, the neoclassical Pantheon-like head office of the city's Bank.

Going straight ahead at Rue Saint-Jacques, by 16.30 you arrive at the Bell Centre. Montréal Canadiens vs Boston Bruins. Three periods of twenty minutes of ice-hockey professionals, fighting like Mohawk warriors with the goal of bringing glory and honor to themselves and their tribes in "The Creator's Game", in eye-catching light and versatile tencel uniforms, consisted of helmets and bulky masks, wide shoulder pads and heavily padded shorts, highlighting their strict geometric shapes; and you will not be able to get the sound of the arena's horn, celebrating Canadiens goals, out of your head.

And it suddenly hits you and start to wonder why are you always in such a hurry? Why so busy running from thing to thing? 'Running through promises that you made and you could not keep?' Why you don't know how to feel your feelings? Maybe it is time to slow down and seek for serenity. And there is an ideal place for that.

In the blink of an eye, you are in "the place of the big fire", the triple-peaked hill in the heart of the city, once used for a fire beacon by the First Nations people. The Mount Royal. Its usual cypress green and cigar brown surface has been now covered by a velvety ice blue veil, and the Tam-Tams drum players have given their place to the snow-tubers who are now furiously sliding the slopes on their J-shaped toboggans. 'But you stand there so nice in your blizzard of ice' hypnotized by the city's glimmering night lights, and for the first time you realize the majesty of this place. Mooniyaang or the first stopping place, turtle-shaped island or Ville-Marie, Metropole or City of Festivals, City of Saints or Sin City; Montréal is a juxtaposition of the old and the new, the place where nations and rivers unite and divide. And for a minute there on the top of the hill you feel lost but happy, unaware of your next mission, but relieved that you made it so far!

S/S '20 SHANGHAI COLLECTION

A Feather on Mount Tai = 泰山鸿毛

Immersed in thoughts and memories, Èr Yī, a Shanghai secret agent, enjoys a few moments of relaxation at her favorite tea house on Fang Bang Middle Road. Suddenly a strange yet familiar holler out of nowhere, violently interrupts the tranquilityprevailed in the room, freezing up her face. Is it someone who has followed her up there? An enemy who has just discovered her? An acquaintance of hers in danger? Or is it about something that she doesn't even want to find out? Trying to figure out what is really happening, very soon she will realize that she knows the answer...

Shanghai-

It was more a promise than an achieved ambition. Traveling to the bustling city of Shanghai.

The night falls and finds you in your red linen dress, strolling on the Bund along the Huangpu River, admiring the striking panorama of the neoclassical buildings facing off against the soaring mirrored towers of Pudong. Surrounded by so many differences, simultaneously with so much compatibility, you start to understand what eventually this enormous city means.

A blend of 20s Art Deco, Asian tradition and Western Postmodernism, avant-garde glass and steel structures towards old-world brick and mortar shikumen residences -allusions to Chinese architecture-, city blocks covered by the iron gates of Lane neighborhoods, and buildings with whitewashed walls, distinctive rooflines, 'dragon walls', latticework and keyhole windows; So neoclassical and ubermodern, the city-ode to the cyberpunk movement, is a stimulating portrait of contrasts and contradictions, a battlefield of the futuristic and the traditional.

Gazing upon the constant flow of the water and its various formations along the river bank, shuttering the reflecting images of the cityscape as the boats are passing by, makes you think of your next watercolor painting. You can picture a bevy of young women dressed in minimal lines and clear shapes, enriched with traditional details and silhouettes inspired by the Cheongsam -that became the symbol of women's liberation by the praised Madame Wellington Koo-, and influences from the Hanfu movement, strict geometric cuts, Chinese ideograms' embroideries, and Mao collars. All of them in soft and light sustainable fabrics as tencel, cotton, linen and banana silk. Then color them in warm shades taken from Shanghai's flighty nightlife and burgeoning art scene, a palette moving between red and terracotta, black and white. And now it feels right! The ideal aquarelle simulating a hot summer in China's biggest city.

Living in and feeling Shanghai's vibes is like a fantasy. Although you know that this trip is coming to an end, and soon you have to catch the flight to your next destination. Until, all of a sudden, you encounter him, among the crowd, coming towards the Nanjing Road. After all these years trying to get used to his absence, now he appears out of nowhere. The one and only person you gave that promise. Like Shanghai Lily meeting up with Donald Harvey aboard the Shanghai Express, your heart is about to break. How is it possible to know what to do? Continue or stop your journey, everything is mixed now in your cluttered head.

Η ΣΤΕΛΛΑ ΠΑΝΑΓΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ ΚΑΙ Η ΒΑΛΙΣΙΑ ΓΚΟΤΣΗ ΔΗΜΙΟΥΡΓΗΣΑΝ ΤΟ ΕΛΛΗΝΙΚΟ BRAND 2+1=2, ΜΕ ΝΟΜΑΔΙΚΟ CONCEPT.

ο 1919 ΔΗΜΟΣΙΕΥΤΗΚΕ ΣΤΟ ΓΑΛΑΙΚΟ avant garde περιοδικό SIG ένα κείμενο του Pierre Albert-Birot που είχε τον τίτλο «2+1=2». Από εχεί προέχυψε η ονομασία του brand της Στέλλας Παναγοπούλου και της Βαλίσιας Γκότοπ, οι οποίες μοιράστικαν την επιθυμία να δημηουργήσουν ένα concept μόδας που να μην αντιμετωπίζει τα ρούχα σαν χρησικά είδη, αλλά περισσότερο σαν πολυδιάστατες δημιουργίες, που αφηγούνται μια ιστορία και ταυτόχρονα μπορούν εύκολα να φορεθούν. «Οι τάσεις δεν μας αφορούν. Στοχεύουμε στη διαχρονικότητα και στιν άνεσης, αναφέρει η Βαλίσια Γκότοπ.

Αν και διαφορετικές μεταξύ τους, μοιράζονται τον ενθουσιασμό για την τέχνη, τη γνώση, την περιπλάνηση. Έτσι, προκύπτει το νομαδικό concept πάνω στο οποίο βασίζεται το brand. Κάθε συλλογή είναι εμπνευσμένη από διαφορετική τοποθεσία και παίρνει το όνομά τις. Με αφορμή ένα road trip που έκανε η Στέλλα στη Νότια Γαλλία, γεννήθηκε η συλλογή Άνοιξη/Καλοκαίρι 2019, με τίτλο Rousillon. Ακολουθόντας την αισθητική του τόπου, η παλέτα κινείται στους τόνους του κεραμιδιού και της ώχρας. Το concept της φωτογράφισης έχει στοιχεία country life, ενώ η αφίσα απεικονίζει το Mont St. Victoire, στο σποίο ο Paul Cézanne είχε αφιερώσει μια σειρά από πίνακες. Παρά τη νοπτή περιήγηση ανά τον κόσμο, διαπιστώνουμε μια σταθερή σχεδιαστική ταυτότητα: γεωμετρία, μίνιμαλ ύφος, μονοχρωμίες. Κοιτάζοντας τις δημιουργίες τους, διαπίστωσα αυτή τη συνέπεια, αν και διέκρινα διαφορές ανάμεσα στα θηλυκά φορέματα της πολαιότερης συλλογής, Los Angeles, και στα αυστηρά παλτό της Κελεγανόται. Είπαμε ότι 2 συν 1 ίσον 2! Δεν υπάρχουν κανόντεγς. • ΚΕΛΑΥ ΣΤΑΥΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ *Info: www.2plus lequals2.com
